Overview of Online Verification Tools for Credential Evaluators

Presented by:

Martha Van Devender

Senior Evaluator, Educational Credential Evaluators (ECE)

mvandevender@ece.org

Session Overview

- Number of tools available online has been increasing
- Tool can be national database
 - verify all the university degrees awarded in country.
- Other tools validate entire academic record
 - Tends to be maintained by specific school
- Tools as varied as educational systems
 - from all parts of the world
- Introduce viewers to some of these verification tools
- Discussion of how to incorporate these tools into your documentation and evaluation practices

What Do I Mean By Online Verification?

- In order to ensure document authenticity and encourage student mobility, many educational institutions are starting to offer new online verification services.
- With a few pieces of information unique to the individual or document, one can go online and confirm the information found in an educational document. Online verification is a process.
- Online verification tools can be used to guarantee that credential evaluations are based on authentic information, even if we, the credential evaluators, never have the physical documents.

Types of Online Verification Tools

- These tools exist at both the secondary and post-secondary levels.
- Lots of types of institutions, from single schools to national ministries, are offering online verification tools. External examination boards, like the ones we see in the UK, even offer this service.
- Verification results can range from simply confirming graduation to reproducing a portion or complete record of the transcript or grades.
- Some cost money to use. I'm talking about free ones today.

Every tool functions a little differently, so be prepared to explore. And fail and then try again, at least three times.

Reasons and Rationales

These tools are created for various reasons. Authentication is only part of it.

- public information laws
- protect institutional image and reputation
- combat fraud and corruption
- ensure qualifications of employees
- showcase new technology
- customer service for students and third parties
- encourage mobility

Graduation Booklets

- Records go back to the University College, Nairobi (1967!), but they are incomplete and sometimes mislabeled
- Newer transcripts do confirm degree completion, but they do not use a date
- Graduation tends to be six months to a year after completion.
 - Tip: do not try to look a student up under the wrong ceremony

Below the header is a search bar and social media icons. The main content area is titled 'Graduation Booklets' and features a list of links to various graduation ceremonies, such as 'The 60th Graduation Ceremony, University of Nairobi held on December 21, 2018 at the Chancellor's Court'. An image of graduates in black and purple gowns is visible on the right side of the page.

- In order to verify degrees, you only need the student's name.
- To verify transcripts, you need three pieces of information.
 - certificate number, which is at the top right corner of the transcript under the student photo
 - student code, which follows the student's name on the transcript on the left just before the courses
 - date of issue, which is at the bottom left of the document
- If it works correctly, it shows the student name and a PDF copy of their transcript.

- We have been using thesis databases as confirmation of graduation/degree completion, since the thesis tends to be the final requirement for most programs across this region. This school has a digital repository for the theses at all levels of education, from Bachillerato through Doctorado.

Brazilian Federal Universities

Once we encountered a few more online transcript verification tools from Brazil, we started to get déjà vu. Many of them looked and functioned in a very similar manner. We began to look for patterns.

It appears that the federal university system shares software, including the Sistema Integrado de Gestão de Atividades Acadêmicas (SIGAA).

Once we started looking, we found over 25 federal universities, centers, and institutes who use the same online verification system. Presumably, we will see it across the entire system in the next few years. The actual educational documents should mention the verification tool website, if it exists.

Instructions:

1. By default, the search function uses "OR" logic (e.g. Country OR Level OR Institution). This will show all records that have the ANY of the conditions entered. You can search using "OR" logic (e.g. Country OR Level OR Institution) by leaving the "Find all conditions" checkbox unchecked.

Search using "AND" logic (e.g. Country AND Level AND Institution) by checking the "Find all conditions" checkbox. This option will show only records that have ALL the conditions in one record. Example: To see only Brazilian secondary records, type in Brazil (Country) and Secondary (Level) and check the Find All Conditions checkbox. Note this would also include Brazilian post secondary credentials, as the word "secondary" is still included.

Note: in the database records, we used "post secondary" rather than "post-secondary," so be sure to exclude the hyphen in your search.

2. Once the results come up, you can click on each line to see the detail on only that record.

3. To do another search, be sure to return to the main search page by clicking here.

Country	<input type="text"/>
Level	<input type="text"/>
Institution/Authority	<input type="text"/>

Find all conditions (i.e. "AND")

What To Do With The Information

- Make your documentation requirements flexible
 - In cases where you can confirm the complete set of grades in a student's record, do you need to see any physical version of it anymore?
 - It is worth discussing institutional policy on foreign educational documents that have been verified online. How do you want to record it? Does it comply with larger privacy or record-keeping issues?
- Verify all and keep track
 - If you are able to verify a document, you should start to use the tool in further instances.
 - Verify out of habit, not suspicion
 - Design a way to keep track of online verifications
 - Share these resources
 - When we use these tools, we help fight corruption and fraud.

Additional Considerations

- Privacy is a factor.
 - Don't ask for additional information to verify. Trust-worthy tools should rely on information available publicly or in the specific documents.
 - You can register to use a tool, if required. But do your due diligence first. Does it seem legitimate?
 - Cambridge International Exams makes you register to check results in their database. They are a well-known provider of external exams. It is a reasonable request to protect the integrity of the exams.
- Tools may not always be available, even if they exist.
 - Make sure you have a contingency plan if a tool you rely on goes down
 - Save what you can

Final Thoughts

- Verification tools exist at multiple levels of education.
- They can include a variety of results, from just names of degrees to full electronic versions of results.
- These tools increase the profile of graduates.
- All types of institutions, from individual schools to ministries, create this type of resource.
- New online verification tools are becoming available all the time.

Can you share any other online verification tools that you like?

Any further questions? THANK YOU!
